

Hunting in Virginia's State Forests

All State Forests are managed by the Virginia Department of Forestry (VDOF) for multiple-use purposes, including watershed protection, recreation, timber production, hunting, fishing and applied forest research. The State Forests are self-supporting (no taxes are used to operate the system).

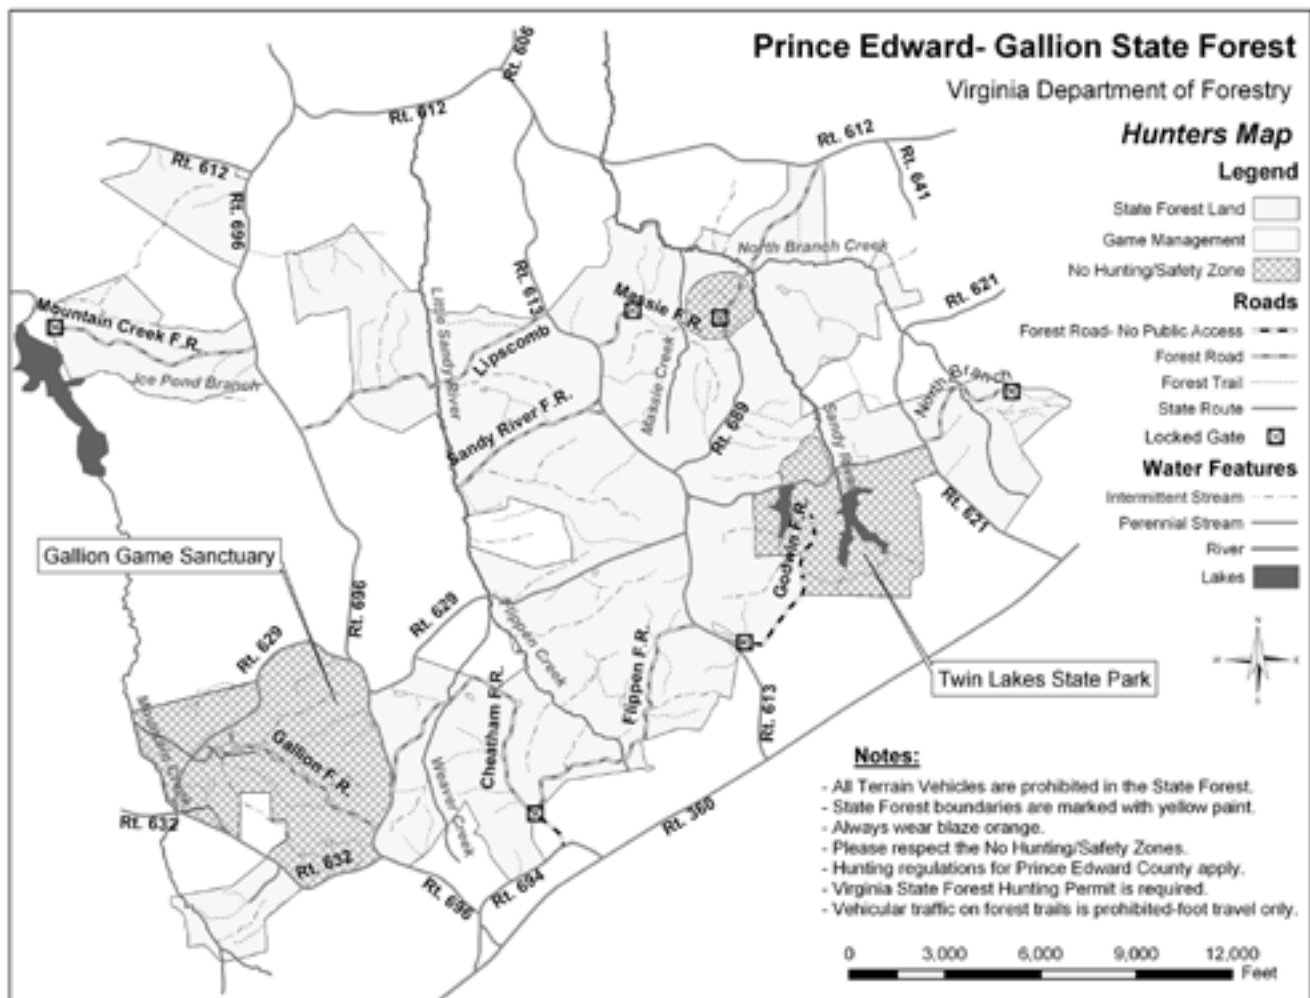

- State Forests are open daily from dawn to dusk.
- There are no charges to visit the State Forests.
- Foot travel, non-motorized bikes and horses are permitted.
- ATVs are not permitted on any of the State Forests.
- A valid Virginia hunting license AND a State Forest Permit ($10 per year) are required for hunting or trapping in the forests. Permits can be purchased from participating vendors or from the Cumberland State Forest office.
- State Forest hunting regulations and seasons follow those of the surrounding counties. Check hunting regulation pamphlets for special restrictions on State Forest lands.
- Wear blaze orange during hunting season.

Prince Edward-Gallion State Forest

The 6,496 acres of the Prince Edward-Gallion State Forest are located in the piedmont of Virginia. The forest is 15 miles southeast of Farmville, 5 miles southeast of Burkeville along State Route 696 and 613.

While traveling through the Forest, you will observe several different environments. Oak-hickory forests, stands of loblolly pine and cut-over areas attract many different forms of wildlife. White-tailed deer, wild turkey and bobcats are common residents of this productive and well-managed natural resource.

Hunting is allowed on most of this Forest, however, hunting is prohibited in the following safety zones (surrounding areas of): VDOF Office, houses, state roads and Twin Lakes State Park.
